UNL PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

The Agricultural Leadership, Education, and Communication Department at UNL is a leader in developing human potential through innovation and excellence. We prepare and advance the careers of current and future teachers, leaders, and communicators by engaging in theory and best practices in teaching, research, and extension while delivering on our core values of dignity, excellence, and collaboration.

Home of Husker High School Day

- ✔ Support the implementation of the only immersive, on-campus, mock high-school day for agricultural education in the country.

Teach & Co-Teach Undergraduate Preservice Teachers

- ✔ Mentor, advise, support, and teach across our undergraduate programming while collaborating with our faculty teacher preparation team, supporting teacher professional development, and engaging your teaching expertise.

Deliver on a Statewide Mission for CTE

- ✔ Prepare future teachers for careers in Skilled and Technical Sciences (STS) and Agricultural Education while partnering across CTE areas to deliver on the land grant mission of research, teaching, and extension.

"My Ph.D program and assistantship have taken me along pathways and opportunities I never imagined possible before arriving at ALEC and UNL. I supervise student teachers, facilitate teacher preparation courses, develop and organize innovative experiential learning programs, and write school-based agricultural education curriculum. Upon graduation, I will leverage my unique experiences from across my coursework, assistantship responsibilities, and other additional roles as I pursue a faculty position as a teacher educator and researcher."
